Non-GAAP Disclosures:

Delek US and Delek Logistics believe that the presentation of EBITDA, distributable cash flow and distribution coverage ratio provides useful information to investors in assessing their financial condition, results of operations and cash flow their business is generating. EBITDA, distributable cash flow and distribution coverage ratio should not be considered as alternatives to net income, operating income, cash from operations or any other measure of financial performance or liquidity presented in accordance with U.S. GAAP. EBITDA, distributable cash flow and distribution coverage ratio have important limitations as analytical tools because they exclude some, but not all, items that affect net income. Additionally, because EBITDA, distributable cash flow and distribution coverage ratio may be defined differently by other companies in its industry, Delek US' and Delek Logistics' definitions may not be comparable to similarly titled measures of other companies, thereby diminishing their utility. Please see reconciliations of EBITDA and distributable cash flow to their most directly comparable financial measures calculated and presented in accordance with U.S. GAAP in the appendix.

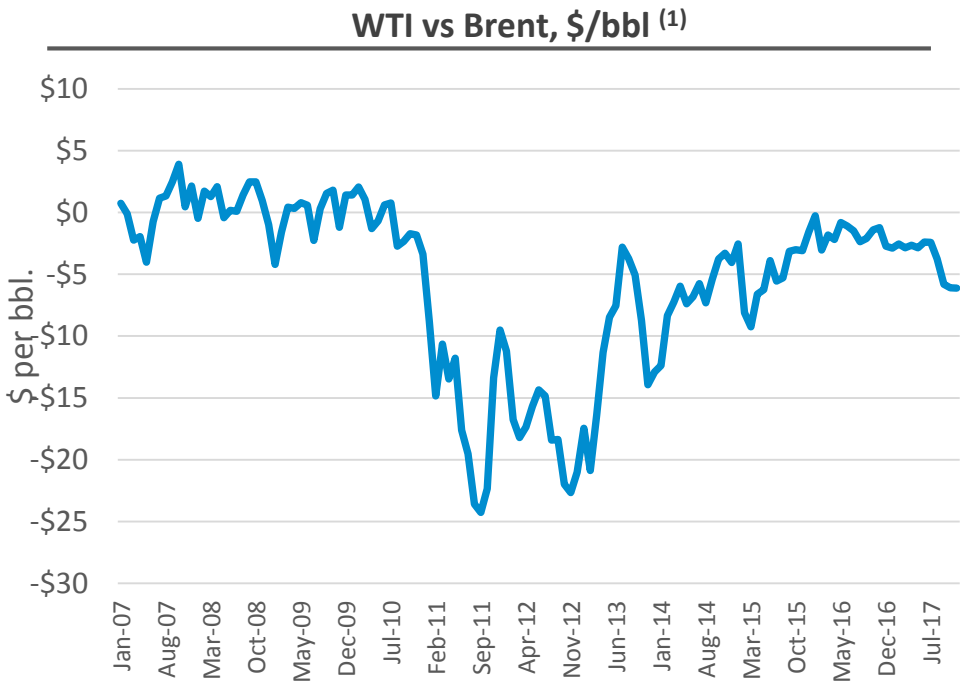

Current Refining Market Environment

WTI-Brent Crude Oil Price Differential Trends Improving

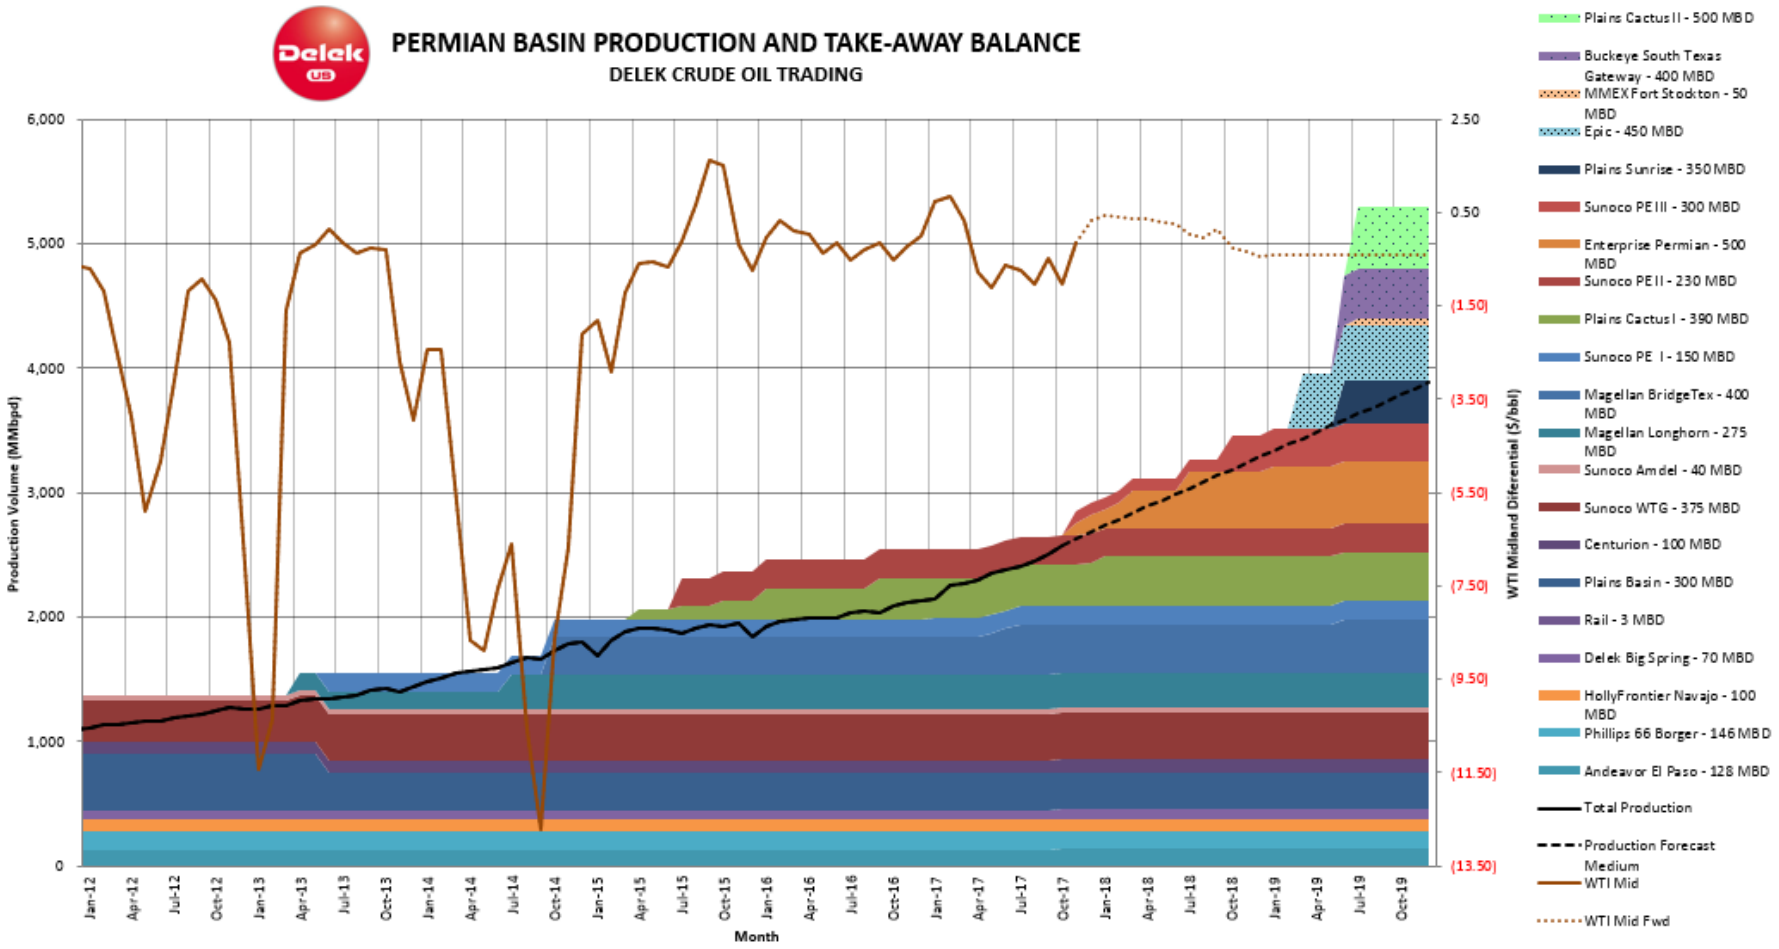

Differential is additive to crack spread trends in the current market environment

- WTI versus Brent has widened
  - Began in early 2017
- Primary drivers of this change include:
  - Global market improvement - OPEC cuts
  - Current WTI price supports production in U.S.
  - Increased light production from Shale plays
  - Transportation cost to clear in the export market
- Increased production of light domestic crude oil
  - Permian Basin production has continued to grow
  - Light barrels will need to clear the market

1) Differential source: Argus – November 30, 2017

Permian Basin Outlook

- Outlook assumes production growth in 2017 of 600 kbpd
- Permian pipeline take-away utilization should remain >90% during 2018
- Plains Sunrise Expansion is the only 2019 project currently committed out of announced pipelines

Light-Heavy Crude Oil Price Differential Trends Improving

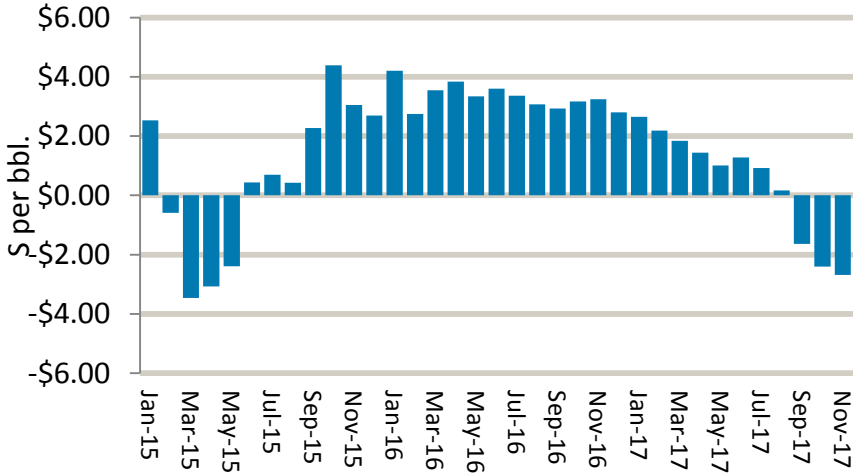

WTI versus Mars and Maya differentials favor light crude oil refineries

- Light – Heavy crude oil differential has narrowed during 2017
  - OPEC cuts have primarily been medium sour barrels
  - Heavy sour production declines in Mexico and Venezuela
  - Majority of barrels from the U.S. shale production are light sweet
- This change in differentials affects the Gulf Coast refining complex economics
  - Most US Gulf Coast refineries are configured to run medium/heavy
  - Significant impact on effective refinery capacity as light crude oil is increased
  - Capital investment can be significant to overcome bottlenecks

Refinery Configuration can Limit Crude Oil Slate Flexibility

Gulf Coast primarily configured to heavy crude oil limiting ability to process lighter barrels

- Heavy crude oil refineries cannot easily digest the increased diesel and lighter content of light crudes like WTI
  - Equipment limits are reached quickly:
    - Crude Tower Diameter
    - Crude Heater \ Heat Exchange
    - LPG & Light Naphtha Handling
  - Significant impact on effective refinery capacity as light crude oil is increased
  - High margin conversion units generally are underutilized without intermediate product purchases
- Capital investment can be significant to overcome bottlenecks
