OneMain Financial Donates Technology Resources to Boys and Girls Club of Evansville to Expand Access to Financial Education

Evansville, IN – July 27, 2026 – OneMain Financial today announced the donation of 200 iPads and 200 Microsoft Surface laptops to the Boys and Girls Club of Evansville, Indiana. The donation is part of the company's efforts to expand access to technology and financial education for students building their financial futures. OneMain has partnered with the local Boys and Girls Club since 2008, donating more than $650,000 over the course of the partnership and hosting a community clean-up day with the Club for the past 14 years. The company also supports the Boys & Girls Club's financial literacy program, which teaches essential skills like budgeting, saving, investing, and credit management.

"Our long-standing partnership with the Boys & Girls Club of Evansville reflects our shared commitment to helping kids learn, grow, and build confidence," said Paola Garcia Abbo, Head of Impact at OneMain Financial. "These technology tools will help promote financial education and create meaningful opportunities for young people, while giving back to the Evansville community."

OneMain's nationwide initiative to repurpose surplus company technology and place it in classrooms is primarily focused on providing resources to schools participating in OneMain Credit Worthy, the company's flagship financial education program. The Credit Worthy curriculum provides students with digital interactive lessons in budgeting, credit and responsible financial decision-making. To date, the program has delivered more than 1 million hours of financial education and reached over 5,500 schools nationwide—encompassing 20% of all U.S. high schools.

In Indiana, the program has reached more than 10,000 students since 2021, with 43 schools participating in the 2025–2026 academic year. Beginning with the Class of 2028, high school students must complete a standalone personal financial responsibility course to graduate. OneMain Credit Worthy can help educators implement this requirement by providing free, high-quality curriculum designed to align with Indiana's academic standards and help students build stronger financial futures.

OneMain's investment reflects its roots in Indiana and ongoing commitment to the communities it serves. The company employs nearly 1,200 people across its corporate headquarters in Evansville and 48 community-based branches throughout the state, working every day to help hardworking Hoosiers improve their financial well-being.
