OneMain Financial Donates iPads to Kansas City Kansas Public Schools to Expand Access to Financial Education

Kansas City, KS – June 26, 2026 – OneMain Financial today announced the donation of 100 iPads to Kansas City Kansas Public Schools as part of its efforts to expand access to technology and financial education for students building their financial futures.

The laptop donation is part of OneMain's nationwide initiative to repurpose surplus company technology and place it in classrooms, with priority given to schools participating in OneMain Credit Worthy, the company's flagship financial education program. By improving technology in classrooms teaching Credit Worthy, OneMain is helping schools deliver financial education and real-world learning to prepare students for life beyond the classroom.

Beginning with the class of 2028, the state of Kansas will require high school students to complete a one-semester financial literacy course in order to graduate. Credit Worthy helps students across the country meet mandated high school financial literacy requirements. By adopting Credit Worthy, schools can provide top-tier financial education curriculum at no cost to their districts.

The Credit Worthy curriculum provides students with digital interactive lessons in budgeting, credit and responsible financial decision-making. To date, the program has delivered more than 1 million hours of financial education and reached over 5,500 schools nationwide—encompassing 20% of all U.S. high schools.

In Kansas, the program has reached more than 8,200 students since 2021, with nearly 20 schools participating in the 2025-2026 academic year.

"OneMain is committed to strengthening communities by investing in students and expanding access to meaningful opportunities," said Paola Garcia Abbo, Head of Impact at OneMain Financial. "Through our collaboration with local schools, we're delivering financial education and technology tools directly to classrooms, empowering students with the knowledge, skills and confidence they need to build their futures."

OneMain's investment reflects its roots in Kansas and ongoing commitment to the communities it serves. The company employs more than 40 people across 12 community-based branches throughout the state, working every day to help hardworking Kansans improve their financial well-being.
