EnPro Industries Releases First Corporate Sustainability Report

CHARLOTTE, N.C., September 17, 2019 -- EnPro Industries, Inc. (NYSE: NPO), has released its first corporate sustainability report, which can be viewed at <https://www.enproindustries.com/about-us/environmental-sustainability/>. The report highlights the company's environmental performance, cultural initiatives, ethics and compliance practices, innovation efforts, employee training programs and safety initiatives and accomplishments. With this inaugural report, EnPro joins the global community of companies reporting transparently about their efforts in corporate responsibility.

"On behalf of my EnPro colleagues, I am proud to share our sustainability story in our inaugural sustainability report." said Marvin Riley, President and Chief Executive Officer. "At EnPro we have created a dual bottom line culture, which means we're committed to delivering both strong financial results and maximizing the development of our colleagues each and every day. We are also committed to protecting our planet and minimizing our environmental impacts across our operations. This approach ensures that EnPro thrives for the next 100+ years."

The report is structured according to global best practices for corporate sustainability reporting. It is based upon an assessment of which topics are most relevant to the company's stakeholders, the company's impacts on the world, and those factors that drive long-term value creation. It includes detailed discussions of EnPro's world-class health and safety programs, key metrics on environmental impact, and commitment to human development and innovation across all its subsidiaries and product lines.
